CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILROAD.-The proximity of the coal and iron fields and their perfect accessibility by means of railroad and water communications, constitute advantages which must in due time render Virginia and West Virginia the centre of a vast manufacturing industry. The future great iron furnaces of our continent will be located in the Kanawha Valley. Their establishment must exercise an important influence on the future of the State. Heretofore these treasures have been virtually scaled both to Virginia and the world. But the completion of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, a few months hence, will open them to the millions of consumers both in the East and West. This railroad penetrates the richest mineral regions in the Virginias. It follows the passage way which nature herself has made between the Ohio valley and the Atlantic. The New River seems to plunge madly into the very heart of the iron mountains, and literally forces its way for itself through the sold rocks. On either side of the mad foaming torrent the tall mountains rise almost perpendicularly in grandeur to the skies. In the clefts of these mountains, and just above the foaming torrent within reach of its spray, a passage is cut for the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. In some places the grading affords the grandest triumphs of engineering science on our continent, and presents another remarkable evidence of the human genius and perseverance that seem to conquer impossibilities. The Chesapeake and Ohio passes through a region heretofore regarded as inaccessible, and brings within reach of human needs the stores that have been treasured through all time in the most valuable mineral deposits on our continent. - New York

Monaco, the last stronghold of the gamblers of Europe, was treated to a genuine sensation a few weeks since. There appeared upon the scene a party of elegantly dressed Americans in glossy black suits, a profusion of diamond rings, studs and brooches, and tall hats of very shiny material. These individuals took but little interest in the games of chance which abounded all about them. They played a little and awkwardly, lost trifling sums, but in a few days improved wonderfully; played together, pocketed 140,000 francs and broke the bank, whereupon the compeers accused them of being a band of cheats; to this charge the Americans replied by a display of revolvers which they seemed nothing loth to use. The appearance of the weapons caused the Italian and French gamblers to fly precipitately from the field. The Americans departed with their spoils, and the card sharpers of Monaco are wondering if this American invasion is to be repeated, and if so, how to protect themselves against shrewder and bolder rogues than themselves.
